One of the necessary devices for this will be thumb drives. Not too long ago, Kingston introduced us with the very first thumb drives they launched, in the market. But those were just the beginning, because this year, Kingston did the sequel. No, it did not do any poorer than the previous year's model. The only change here was the model name. Instead of using the "Spectra" name, they used the one that is considered to be more suitable. In short, it is the HyperX Micro". Though it looks like a typical thumb drive, its title is little bit more than a decoy. Under the casings, we can see a Kingston logo. HyperX Micro is a great thumb drive to carry your files and media anywhere you go. But most importantly, it saves you time and effort. With Kingston, you get fast and reliable USB support. Moreover, it is also great if you are looking for a thumb drive that is plug and play, and all you have to do is drop it into your system.
